The ambassador of Ghana in Japan encourages Baamboo team

Friday, December 29th, Baamboo co-founders Salman Mohammed, a Kufuor Scholar from Ghana and Naveen Tripathi, MBA graduate from Hitotsubashi ICS, visited embassy of Ghana in Tokyo to seek blessings of The Ghanaian ambassador, Honourable Sylvester J.K Parker. While encouraging the Baamboo team to keep up with their vision of building a sustainable society, the ambassador capitalized on the recent launch of a satellite by Ghanaian students as an example to how the youth are making contribution through their vision and innovation.

Baamboo is an online skill-based volunteer platform that connects social-good organizations to professionals and industry experts, and enables them to connect, share and grow together while creating social values. Inspired by the prospects of Baamboo, the ambassador reiterates that Baamboo has the potential to connect Japanese organizations and professionals to social leaders in African and Asian countries for a mutually beneficial partnership.
